- ⌘ Borges:
 - There's no debate that communication was an issue, there's no debate that if we were seeing an appeal on communication that the vote would not be in Larson's favor. But due to the fact that we discussed things not germane to the specific and confined question of the dean meeting absence request, we are essentially tainting the jury that is this senate, which is a huge issue. We cannot choose what we want to be germane just because it makes us feel good and proves our point; germane debate should be specific to what is being seen. Speaker Holmes has established with E&A Confirmations that germane debate only includes submitted material, no matter what outside concerns we may have had. If I were Larson, I'd appeal this to the Judicial Council, as this seems discriminatory.
- ⌘ Cimillo
 - Thanks for seeing how important funding the students as much as we can is.
- ⌘ Kennaugh
 - Want to add to the comment on communication. When we don't put things on a better face to face vote. I think that we should do that because it doesn't reflect the communication standard. Holding someone else to a separate communication standard than we do ourselves.
- ⌘ Brown
 - I read through what borges wrote and to echo, I feel a bit disillusioned by the debate I watched. It was mean and discriminatory. I wish comments like that were shut down for those comments. It felt like mean girls. As a body, we should focus on going against exclusivity. Kudos to Larsen for persistence and passion.
- ⌘ Donahue
 - I do agree we should have not pointed out that he was laughing when he was nervous. It was admirable that he stood up there and should not have been made fun of, especially since it is being livestreamed.
- ⌘ Yalamanchili
 - I echo the sentiments. I commend larsen. I understand how nerve-wracking it can be. It can be very easy to take someone's nervousness and their reaction to call it unprofessional. Its easy to take the moral high ground. We should understand the experience the other person is going through.
 - United Nations Association is doing a Model UN Conference for highschoolers. We need volunteers for the date of Nov 17-19 Very interesting topics like One Piece!!!!
- ⌘ Lacasse
 - United Auto Workers Picket. 7:30 am to 7:30 pm at 10300 Boggy Creek Road, Orlando, FL 32834
 - United Faculty of Florida, making sure they have at least 60 % membership (message me for link to help get your teachers in the union)
- ⌘ Caringal
 - I apologize if he had anxiety, but I wanted to note that past actions still played a role in his role as a senator.
- ⌘ Duke
 - I reiterate. People need to not make comments about behavior
- ⌘ Carter
 - YDSA is having an annual clothing drive on October 24th & 25th at Memory Mall??
- ⌘ Vasquez
 - I sympathize with caringal's comments, we should still understand that some behaviors are not respectful
- ⌘ Kostis
 - Go to the strikes! There is a donation drive to be delivered to students. The protest that yalamanchili mentioned is also important
 - FPEP is packing up 90 boxes of books to a local prison and we need as much help as we can get
- ⌘ Pohlmann
 - As a body, we need to be a bit more weary of twisting people's words and more respect for each other in that aspect
- ⌘ Lazo
 - If we advocate for other senators, we have to respect the ELA and the senate body and that involved body language. If we continue to let things like this to go, we set a precedent and hurt this student body
- ⌘ Holmes
 - Contrary to Chair Borge's statement, I indeed did not say it is in regards to submitted materials, but rather relevancy. If you recall, a senator was asked about what their political affiliation is during confirmations. To represent the student body, regarding the colleges is not an issue germane specific to her confirmation. Julian Larson is the individual who mentioned his attendance in senate as a whole. So on this floor, debate responding to that is relevant. Aside from this: Regarding his attendance to a dean meeting during committee, I allowed the questioning and debate because I believed that attendance in the senate is relevant to the attendance of the dean meeting. Not only did I allow debate regarding overall attendance, Chair Borges apologized for mentioning that he didn't agree with that decision during debate. I not only told him then that he was allowed to disagree and state his opinion, but after adjourning I reiterated that same thing. If I'm being quite honest, debate regarding how much he loves his boating RSO is not relevant to his attendance either. But that was allowed too. As you can see I'm a lenient chair. Chair Borges can disagree with me allowing relevancy, but discrimination was not permitted. I didn't silence any supportive or opposing views, I allowed debate based on the wishes of the committee and senate, and a vote count allowing "yes, no, and abstention" was not withheld from any members. Saying that the majority decision of this body coupled with my impartialness "seems discriminatory" is on the mere border of accusatory, and I will not stand for such a thing. Your opinion is your own, but your closing statement is okay whatsoever unless you have valid evidence.

⊂ Kennaugh

- He can't go through reinstatement?
- Holmes: No. He can go through judicial again
- Can past absence be brought up on the floor?
- Holmes: We can discuss that, I am open-minded. We can deliberate on it privately.
